My Dear Psynie..

I think this might be the last time I reach out to you. But before I go, I just want to say thank you. Thank you for the good days, the bad days, every memory, big or small, and all those moments. Thank you for being a part of this one life I get to live abbas. You made my world feel different, softer, warmer, and happier in ways I can't explain. Before you, life was just going on, but when you came along, even the simplest things started feeling special. A message from you could change my entire mood and just talking to you could make everything feel okay. I was genuinely happy with you. I loved sharing my days with you, listening to yours, knowing the smallest things about your life, and being the person you could come to when something happened. I loved our random conversations, our stupid talks, our laughter, and all those moments when neither of us wanted the day to end. I loved the feeling of having you in my life.

And honestly, I never imagined we'd end up here, being two people who once meant everything to each other but slowly became strangers.The old version of us would be so sad to see us now abbas. We went from sharing everything to barely knowing what's happening in each other's lives. Since we stopped texting like we used to, I don't know about your day anymore. I don't know what you're going through, what makes you happy, what upsets you, or what's happening in your life. I miss when you'd tell me everything. I miss being a part of your everyday life. I miss your calls, your texts, and the comfort of knowing I could talk to you about anything.I miss you. Dont worry, not as a lover, but as a person.

But Abbas, I'm not asking you to love me anymore. I'm not asking you to come back or give me the relationship we once had. I'm asking for closure. Just closure.

I've always said that even if we couldn't end up together, I wanted us to end things as friends. I wanted the comfort, the talks, the happiness, and atleast one proper conversation where we could talk like two people who were best friends once I wanted us to acknowledge what we had instead of acting like none of it ever mattered.

Is that really too much to ask?

I'm not asking you to choose me. I'm not asking you to change your mind about us. I'm not asking you to promise me a future. I'm just asking you to treat me like someone who once meant something to you. Because you weren't just some random person in my life abbas. You were my love, my friend,my best friend, my everything.. You were someone whose happiness mattered to me, whose problems worried me, and whose smallest actions could change my entire day.I cared about the little things. I waited for your messages. I looked forward to your calls. I wanted to know about your day, even the most boring parts, because they were yours. I wanted to be there when you were happy, when things went wrong, when you needed someone to listen, and when life felt difficult. I wanted to make you feel wanted in all the little ways people don't always notice.

I cant keep being the one who reached out, waited, wanted to talk, and wondered why things weren't the same anymore. I cant keep asking for conversations, time, or just the feeling that my presence mattered. Woah woah, You are that type of person who could say im "Needy", just coz i wanted to meet you. "Materialistic", just coz i wanted to experience something which ive not in my entire life, but with you. "Selfish", when i was just saying what was happening with me, and many more. "I should've gone that day, yet i chose to stay","I could spit on you", "I do not care about your health aditi", many more of your statements recently has made me really happy abbas..

I never wanted to compete with your friends, your work, or anything else in your life. I never wanted to be your entire world. I just wanted to feel like I mattered in it.

I used to wonder how you could stay up until two in the morning with your friends, or with your daniel, but get tired when it came to spending time with me by 11. I wondered how you could make time for other things while time with me always seemed to be something that could wait.. You can make time for everything and anything, but while it comes to me, you get busy. You can make time to call others, but not me. Ofc i've stopped. why? Because i ruin your day, i annoy you, and i dont wanna be someone's day ruiner yk.

Maybe those things seemed small to you, but they weren't small to me. They made me question my place in your life. I wanted to feel like talking to me was something you looked forward to too. I wanted to feel wanted without having to ask for it. I wanted to feel loved without having to explain what love was supposed to feel like to me.. Sorry, i took the topic of love.. Abbas, besides text, did you even say you love me on my Birthday? I wanted to celebrate it with you as a gf, but I'm sorry, we were just close friends. Meh...

And now, look at us..

Abbas, just because you're being this rude and horrible to me doesn't mean I'll magically move on easily too. You cannot teach someone how to swim while they're already drowning. I'm already struggling with losing you, and the way you're treating me is making it so much harder. You know very well that your words hurt me. You know how much this whole thing affects me, and yet you still choose to say things and behave in ways that hurt me even more. I don't understand why you have to be so horrible to someone who once meant so much to you. Even if you don't love me anymore, even if you don't want me in your life anymore, does that mean you have to treat me like I never mattered?? It's not like you haven't made mistakes abbas. We both have. Just because I was a chapter in your life filled with flaws and mistakes, does that mean you'll tear the entire chapter apart?

Were there no beautiful moments with me? Were you never genuinely happy with me? Did we never laugh, make memories, share things, or have moments when we were genuinely happy together?Or, as you say, were all those moments negligible?

Because if everything we shared was so negligible, then was your love negligible too??

I refuse to believe that everything was bad. I know we had beautiful moments. I know there was a time when we were happy, when we wanted to talk to each other, and when neither of us could imagine becoming strangers. Why can't we acknowledge that, even if things didn't work out? Why does everything have to become meaningless just because it ended?

I don't regret loving you abbas and please dont let me do that, I wanna have a beautiful memory too. I don't regret the memories we made or the happiness you brought into my life. If I could go back and live those moments again, knowing we'd eventually end up here, a part of me would probably still choose them. Because for a while, you made me really happy. And I'll always be grateful for that.

But I wish you'd understand that I didn't stop caring just because things changed.

There were so many times I wanted to call you, text you, tell you something that happened during my day, or simply ask how you were doing. Sometimes I'd have so much to say, and then I'd stop myself because I didn't know whether you'd even want to hear it. Genuinely, I have so many things to share, but No..Do you know how it feels to have your phone in your hand and want to text them, but choose not to? To miss someone and still have to remind yourself that you can't keep reaching for them? I don't think you understand what that feels like for me. You've grown up, isnt it abbas?

And maybe someday, you'll miss me too. (ofc you'll say no.) But you'll miss my calls, my texts, the way I checked up on you, the way I cared about your day, and how I wanted to know everything about your life. You'll miss the random messages, the little updates, the unnecessary questions, and the way I worried about you even when you said you were fine. Maybe you'll miss the way I wanted to hold your hand, touch your face, hug you, and simply be close to you. Maybe you'll miss having someone who genuinely wanted to hear about your day, who would put you to sleep and someone who cared about the smallest things happening in your life.

Maybe you'll miss me someday. Maybe you won't..

But I can't keep waiting for that day. I can't keep hoping that one day you'll suddenly understand everything I tried to tell you while I was still there. You had me when I was reaching out. You had me when I was asking you to talk to me, listen to me. You had me when I was still willing to sit down and figure things out with you.

You wanted me to stop talking to you and texting you? You got it. You wanted me to leave you alone? You got it. You wanted your space? You have it.

And don't worry abbas. I've lost so much of what I once had towards you. I'm slowly losing the love, the hope, and the version of you I kept holding on to. But that doesn't mean the memories disappear overnight. It doesn't mean I can suddenly stop caring about someone who once meant everything to me. I guess you don't need me the way you used to. Maybe you don't need me at all anymore. Ofc you don't. And as much as that hurts to admit, I'm trying to accept it. I closed the door abbas, but I never locked it. I kept hoping you'd turn back and knock, not as a lover, sorry.. but as a person, who was close to me. I kept hoping you'd care enough to ask what happened to us, to notice that I wasn't okay. But you'll never really turn back. And I can't keep standing behind that door, hoping you'll knock. I have to lock it one day, and leave it coz i need to look after my safety, isn't?

I don't know if my absence makes any difference to you. I don't know if you'll notice when I'm no longer the one texting first, asking about your day, or trying to start a conversation. I don't know if you'll ever miss the little things I did or if life will just continue as usual for you. And honestly, I'll take this personally. I'll remember how you treated me when I was already hurting. Maybe someday, all this pain will turn into resentment. Maybe I'll eventually reach a point where I no longer want anything to do with you.

But you probably won't care, will you? You hate me, don't you? So this probably won't even make you sad. Maybe that's what hurts the most. Knowing that the person whose opinion, love, and presence mattered so much to me might not even care that I'm hurting.

I wish you'd given me a proper conversation before letting me become a stranger. You just became a horrible person after your break time.

Because sometimes, the person you miss the most wakes up every day and chooses to live their life without you in it. And maybe that's the answer you've been giving me without actually saying it. Maybe I need to accept that, too.

But accepting that you don't want me anymore doesn't mean I'll stop hurting immediately. I'm gonna miss you as a person I knew before, the comfort, the friendship, the random talks.. There will be random things that remind me of you, and there will be days when I wish I could tell you something but remember that I can't anymore.

I don't want to keep losing myself trying to hold on to someone who isn't holding on to me in the same way. I don't want to keep searching for answers in your silence or wondering whether you miss me. I just want to be okay again. And I hope, someday, I will be.

But before I finally step away, I need you to understand one thing. I'm not asking for your love anymore. I'm asking for the closure, comfort, and one honest conversation I thought I deserved from someone who once wished to have me by his side. Abbas, remember that statement of yours? "I don't wanna be vulnerable and abandoned." I want you to remember those words.Forget love. Even if we weren't lovers, we were friends, weren't we? We were two people who could hang out, have a good day together, talk about random things, and be there for each other. Go through our September 30 conversation, Abbas. Just read it once and remember how things were between us.. How good friends we were. Im sorry i approached you for love. We wouldve stayed as Best friends forever. I always took care of you. You were always someone special to me, someone I never wanted to see hurt, someone I genuinely wanted to be there for. I never wanted you to feel alone, vulnerable, or abandoned. I tried my best to make sure you knew you had me.. May be I Failed.

And guess what abbas? The person who once said he didn't want to be vulnerable and abandoned ended up abandoning me..

I never abandoned you abbas. But you abandoned me.. Very badly..

And that's what hurts the most. Not just losing the person I loved, but losing the friend ??I thought would still care about me, even if things between us didn't work out. I never expected us to pretend that nothing happened or that we could go back to being exactly who we were. I just thought that, after everything, we could at least treat each other with some kindness. I was there for you when you mattered to me. I never thought that one day I'd be the person begging for a conversation, asking for closure, and wondering how someone who once cared about me could treat me this way.You were special to me abbas. Not just because I loved you, but because of the person you were in my life. And I wish you'd remember that before treating me like I'm someone you can simply walk away from without a second thought. I know I made mistakes too. I'm not saying I was perfect. But did my mistakes erase every good thing I ever did for you? Did they erase all our memories, our friendship, our conversations, and the times we were genuinely happy together?

I never wanted you to feel abandoned. I just never thought you'd make me feel exactly that way..I wanted to be able to talk to you without feeling like a burden. I wanted us to be able to acknowledge our memories without pretending they meant nothing. I wanted to know that we could end this chapter without treating each other like enemies. I didn't expect everything to go back to normal. I didn't expect you to suddenly become the person you were before. I just expected a little kindness from someone who knew how much I was hurting.

I'm not writing this to make you feel guilty, and I'm not writing this because I'm waiting for you to come back. I'm writing this because I've carried so much inside me, and I don't want to leave without saying what I needed you to hear. Yet, as we always said, there are lot more and i cannot write everything here.

I wish things had been different. I wish we had understood each other a little better, tried a little harder, and held on to each other when things started getting difficult.

But I can't change what happened, and I can't make you stay.

All I can do now is accept what is, even if it hurts more than I know how to explain.

Maybe someday, you'll look back and miss the person I was to you. Maybe you'll remember the calls, the texts, the care, and all the little things which are annoying you now.

And if you ever do look back, I hope you remember me kindly, with a good heart.

Not as someone who asked for too much, not as someone who made mistakes, and not as someone who couldn't let go. But as someone who loved you, tried for you, cared about you, Someone who stayed for as long as she could. Someone who gave it her best, even when it hurt. Someone who tolerated your anger and you harsh words.

I don't know if you'll ever understand everything I was trying to say. Maybe you won't. Maybe none of this will make you sad. Maybe you'll read it and move on with your day as if it were nothing. But that's something I can no longer control. I said what I needed to say.

Thank you for the person you were to me and for the happiness I found in being with you.

I'm sorry for the times I hurt you. I'm sorry for the things I could have done better. I genuinely wish the best for you, even now, after everything.

I hope you achieve everything you've ever wanted. I hope life is kind to you. I hope you find happiness, peace, and people who make you feel understood and loved..

Ofc I hope your wife, in future, treats you way more better than me and erases all my memories in your life. I only wish that something that once meant so much to both of us hadn't ended with so much hurt. I think it's time for me to stop reaching out, stop waiting, and stop hoping things will go back to the way they were.

Not because I never loved you, but because I did, and I can't keep hurting myself trying to hold on. I don't know what I'll be to you in the future. Maybe I'll just be a memory. Maybe we'll eventually become strangers who happen to know a little too much about each other.But I'll never pretend that you meant nothing to me.."I AM NOT LIKE YOU"

You meant a lot abbas. More than I probably ever managed to explain properly.

And even though our story didn't turn out the way I wanted, I'm grateful that our paths.

I'm not asking you to choose me anymore. I deserved a little kindness while I was trying to accept losing you. Maybe this is the closure I kept looking for.. May be that kindness was closure. But why am I even asking for it abbas? Isn't kindness the bare minimum? Isn't it something you give to someone who once meant so much to you, someone you shared so many memories with, someone who genuinely cared about you? Why do I have to ask you to be kind to me? Why do I have to beg for a conversation with someone I once spoke to every single day? So, if this really is the last time I reach out to you like this, I want it to end with a thank you, not with anger.. The end i mean the closure which you've snatched away from me.Thank you for the memories. Thank you for the moments that made me happy. Thank you for being a part of my life. Thank you for once being my person.

And thank you for being a chapter of my life that, even though it hurt to reach the end of, I'll never pretend I didn't want to read.

I'm sorry we became this. I'm sorry we couldn't be what we once were. And I'm sorry that somewhere along the way, we lost the little things that once made us feel so close.

I hope you're happy abbas without me. I really do.. As said, may be I'm not even in your diary. Funny right?

I'll miss you. I probably will for a while. But I won't keep reaching out anymore. I won't keep waiting for you to turn back. And I won't keep trying to make someone understand my worth when I've spent so long hoping they'd see it on their own.

I gave you my time, my care, my love, and the best parts of me that I knew how to give.

And I know I tried. I loved you the best way I knew how, and I'll always be grateful for the part of my life that had you in it.

Take care of yourself, okay? And if you ever think of me, I hope you remember the good things too. Because despite how things ended, there was a time when you made me really happy, and I'll never be ungrateful for that.

Maybe someday, we'll both look back at who we were and smile at the memories instead of hurting over what we lost.

This is me letting go of the person I thought would be with me as long as I survive

This is me accepting that our story meant something, even if it didn't last forever.

And this is me choosing to stop waiting for an good ending that might never come.

My love(For the one last time), thank you for being a part of this one life I got to live. For a while, you made it feel more beautiful.

And Abbas, somewhere in the middle of this battle of yours, this whole drama of making me hate you so that I can move on, I hope you realise what you're doing to me. You seem to have decided that the easiest way to make me let go is to become someone I can no longer recognise, someone who can hurt me without thinking twice, someone who can act like I mean nothing. Maybe you think that if you become enough of an asshole, I'll eventually get tired, hate you, and walk away. Maybe you think that will make it easier for both of us. That you'll be able to move on peacefully while I slowly learn to live without you while suffering. So, fine abbas. I shall let you win.

You don't want me to contact you? I won't. You don't want me to annoy you, ask you questions, tell you things, or disturb your privacy? You shall have all of that. I'll give you the distance you've been asking for, even if it's the last thing I want to give you. Maybe you'll be happy now. Maybe you'll finally think, Oh, finally, she's letting me go. Now she'll move on. Now I can have my peace. And you will have your peace abbas. At least, I'll try my best to make sure you do.

But please don't mistake my silence for not caring. Don't think that just because I'm not texting you, I don't think about you. There are still so many things I want to tell you. So many little things happen throughout my day that make me think of you, and sometimes, even now, my first instinct is to tell you about them. Sometimes I remember something funny and want to share it with you. Sometimes I have a question I'd normally ask you. Sometimes I just miss talking to you, and I wish I could tell you that without feeling like I'm disturbing your life. But I stop myself. Not because I have nothing left to say to you, but because I'm trying to respect what you've asked for. I'm not contacting you because I want to give you the peace I hope I failed to give you when we were together. Maybe I made mistakes. Maybe there were times when I overwhelmed you, when I didn't understand you properly, or when I didn't give you the space you needed. I've thought about those things too. And if my absence can give you the peace you wanted, then I'll try to give you that, even if finding my own peace takes me much longer.

But Abbas, there's something I need you to understand. What I wanted was never just to keep you as my boyfriend. Somewhere along the way, I started wishing that even if we couldn't remain lovers, we could still remain friends. Real friends. The kind of friends we were before everything became so complicated. Abbas, I wanted the comfort we had before. To talk to you without overthinking every word, share my day, ask you random questions, laugh, hang out, and make memories without feeling like I'm crossing a line.I just wanted to know if we could still be friends, if there was still room for the connection we once shared. I don't want us to become strangers who once knew everything about each other. But if you genuinely don't want that friendship anymore, I'll have to accept it. I can't force you to keep me in your life. Still, I don't know if I'll ever completely forgive you for how you treated me when I was already struggling to accept losing you. Why was a little kindness so difficult when I needed it the most? You know you own a little piece of my heart somewhere abbas. And that's why, even when I'm angry with you and tell myself to stop caring, there's still a part of me that wants to tell you things and share that familiar comfort with you. I can't simply switch that off. So, if I stay away, please don't assume I've stopped caring. I'm trying to respect your wishes, even on days when I miss you and have a hundred things I want to tell you. I'm choosing silence because I know you want your space, not because I have nothing left to say.

All I want to know is this: do you want us to be formal friends who barely talk, or close friends who can still laugh, talk freely, hang out, and make new memories and make each others day good? And please dont blame me that im not being a friend. I am. Its you, who has changed and became an asshole. I wanted the friendship and comfort we had abbas.

And I hope that, someday, I can think of you without wishing things had been different.

Also abbas, I've realised something even in these silent days. You aren't reaching out to me, and I know you're busy, but you still find time to go out and do things. The reasons you give me honestly feel silly at this point. Because if you wanted to, you could right? Maybe that's the hardest truth I'm finally being forced to accept.

And Abbas, look at the person you've become. Do you really think I'm that easy? Easy to love, easy to hurt, easy to reject, easy to laugh at, and easy to walk away from? Am I really that easy to treat like I never mattered?

You're rejecting me straight to my face abbas, and somehow, a part of me is still struggling to believe that this is really you. Wow. I never thought I'd have to beg someone like this..

I realize that my absence changed nothing abbas. We went from talking untill 2am, to 2 hours, to 2 minutes a day and now 2 days ago, who knows, it'll then be, 2 years ago.

But its okay, I know its all my fault. One thing i would love to repeat in this letter as well.. "Go cry about it", Ofc I will, that hurts, and i do cry.. Its all in God's hand to decide whether we can be the friends who were were before this fuckass relationship chapter. You know, God will also one day think that, "oh she stopped asking about him". and thats when you actually win..Dont worry, the things which youve done to me, good and bad, I shall never remove you from my mind, you will always be remembered.

And yes, I didnt say it enough here, Thank you for every meal you've paid for, Thank you for all the flowers you have given me, Thank you for the every place you have taken me

Thank you for the every date you planned. Although we didnt go. Thats it Abbas.. I really dont know anything about you right now.You will never know how many times I looked at your photo at night with eyes full of tears, just because I missed you every time. Please dont misundertsand, I do not want your love, I do not miss you as my bf, I miss my friend, my best friend. And a gentle advice..I know you will be pissed at me for this, Ofc you'll be coz when I said something about this, you'd said "You are a disgusting person aditi" and you made me repeat that. So yeah, No matter what happens dont become a man who yells at his wife and kids but talks nicley to strangers while they are next to you.

No matter how much i try, I'll be the wrong person always.

Abbas, this is my final conclusion, and I have just one request. Please don't look for mistakes in this letter, don't get pissed, and don't make any decisions after reading this. Just try to see the weight I'm carrying right now. I'm not writing this to fight with you or force you into anything. I'm just trying to let you see what I've been holding inside me all this time.

We have so few days left abbas, and yet we've already ended whatever we had, even our friendship. It's honestly so painful to realise that when we barely have time left, we're choosing to become strangers instead of making a few more memories.

Meh abbas, I miss you. I miss talking to you, sharing things with you, and having you around. And the saddest part? I don't even know if you think about me anymore. I don't know if you miss me, if something reminds you of me, or if I'm just someone you're trying to forget.

I don't even know anymore abbas. I just know that I miss you, and I'm carrying all of this without knowing whether it means anything to you at all.

I guess this is where I'll leave everything abbas. All the things I wanted to tell you, all the questions I wanted to ask, all the memories I wanted us to make, and all the words I kept hoping you'd say. I'm tired of trying to find a place in your life when I don't even know if you still want me there now. I'm not leaving because you stopped being special to me. I'm leaving because I can't keep hurting myself by reaching for someone who keeps asking for distance. A part of me will always wish things had ended differently, that we could have kept our friendship, our comfort, and the little things that made us us. I very well know, your reply after reading al of these would surely be dry. So yeah, Dont even bother to reply if you dont want me at all in your life. Please do not hurt me with those dry, rude words of yours, might not seem like that to you, but you very well know how it does to me.

Thank you for the good days abbas. Thank you for the memories, the laughter, and the version of you who once made me feel so loved. No matter how things are between us now, those moments were real to me, and I'll always carry them with me.

Take care of yourself, okay? Eat properly, look after yourself, and be happy. I hope life gives you everything you're working towards. I hope someday you remember us without anger, and I hope you remember that there was someone who genuinely cared about you and never wanted to become a stranger to you. And if we really are saying goodbye, then goodbye abbas. Not with hatred, not because you meant nothing, but because you meant so much that letting go hurts this badly.

Somewhere, a little piece of my heart will always belong to you. But for now, I'll stop reaching out and let you have the peace you wanted.

Goodbye abbas. You were once my favourite person to tell everything to.. I'll miss you..

I just wanted my friend abbas, not your fuckass definition of friend.

I'll say one thing which will remind you of me??

Whenever you see my pookie god, Let your mind think of me. This was meant to bring a smile on your face, so please smile..

Cyaa abbas.. Never imagined I would write something like this to you. Thought you would be my close friend . But anyhow, Change is inevitable.

Enough right? Felt cringe isnt it??

Thats fine adjust.

Take care abbas... Bye Bye My parama sakha...